126 more taxis this year, 257 more after that

Compromise. Council opts to release one third of 383 plates now, the other two-thirds later

ROBSON FLETCHER
robson.fletcher@metronews.ca

More taxis are coming to Calgary streets, and fares are going up.

In a unanimous vote Monday, city council approved 126 new taxi licence plates to be released before the end of the year, and another 257 to be rolled out later, after data is collected on the initial release and reviewed in early 2015.

City staff initially recommended releasing all 383 new plates at once, noting the number of taxis on Calgary streets has not kept pace with the city's growth.

"We've had 16 per cent growth in taxi plate numbers in 28 years, while the population growth has been 88 per cent," said Mario Henriques, an official in the city's licensing department.

Coun. Diane Colley-Urquhart was among a minority on council who supported releasing all the plates in one fell swoop.

"The bottom line is we're playing catch up here," she said. "The citizens want taxis. Let's give them the taxis and give them all right now."

But other councillors cited uncertainty surrounding the impacts of such a large and sudden boost to the city's taxi fleet, noting 383 more plates would represent a 25-per-cent increase over the 1,526 taxi plates currently out there.

Calgary Cab Drivers Society president Gurjeet Sidhu worried a full release would cut sharply into cabbies' earnings, and was pleased by Monday's compromise.

"I'm happy that at least council didn't do all 383 at once," he said. "They shouldn't do something they can't undo."

Henriques said the new plates, unlike the first 1,311 taxi licences the city issued, will be awarded through a lottery process to experienced drivers and will be non-transferable.

Council also approved an 8.1 per cent increase to taxi rates, meaning the average price for a 10-kilometre trip will jump from $18.80 to $20.27.

‘MIRACLE MOLECULE’ SUPERCHARGES CIRCULATION, PROMISING BETTER BLOOD FLOW, BLOOD PRESSURE AND INCREASED MENTAL CLARITY & STAMINA!

Are you concerned with high blood pressure or cholesterol, a lack of stamina and energy, a dip in libido and physical performance,or the increase of “senior moments?” The answer to living without these health concerns has been discovered in what scientists are calling the most important health breakthrough of our time. The discovery starts with nitric oxide (N-O)!

OVER 40 LOSING CRUCIAL RESERVES

N-O is a natural substance produced by the body that has amazing effects on health and circulation. The American Heart Association published one of many studies showing that many people over 40 don’t produce enough N-O. In fact, your body produces less than half of what it did at 20.

NOBEL PRIZE WINNING DISCOVERY

Three researchers received the prestigious Nobel Prize for this discovery. One of the winners says, “There may be no disease process where this miracle molecule does not have a protective role”.

GOOD NEWS FOR BOOMERS!

Researchers reported that N-O helps with energy levels, blood pressure, cholesterol, joint discomfort, and assisted in strengthening the immune system.

90-SECOND CIRCULATION BOOSTER

Based on the research of Dr. Nathan S. Bryan, PhD, who lectures to doctors around the world about Nitric Oxide, Neogenis® Labs has created a revolutionary lozenge, called Neo 40 daily, that makes it easy to restore N-O levels. This “fast-dissolve” lozenge restores your N-O to youthful levels by dissolving within 90 seconds and begins to work immediately, which leads to better circulation, for many in as little as 20 minutes.

BETTER CIRCULATION TO WHOLE BODY

Better circulation helps increase stamina, maximizes metabolism, helps manage stress and maintains healthy sexual function. Healthy N-O levels also promote better blood pressure and cholesterol as a result of improved circulation to all major organs.

SURPRISE BENEFITS FOR MEN & WOMEN

“Adequate amounts of Nitric Oxide insure sufficient amounts of blood to flow to the extremities, especially the penis, resulting in an erection. The same applies to women; without proper blood flow to the clitoris, orgasms are difficult,” says Dr. Bryan.

Dark = Low Blood Flow Light = Increased Blood Flow

Actual Thermographic Image of Hand shows circulation in hands before and after taking Neo 40 daily. On the Left, the fingertips are almost black showing little blood flow. On the Right, lighter colored fingers show increased blood flow after only 20 minutes.

A boost in Nitric Oxide levels may equal increased sexual sensitivity for men and women. Tammy from Ontario said, “The first night after my first dose I had improved circulation in my hands. I find the increased circulation is a definite benefit in the bedroom.” “We noticed a difference in my husband’s erections within a week. We can’t believe how well it works,” reports pleased wife Marion S., of New York.

NATURAL RESULTS YOU CAN FEEL

Lee L., from CA was stunned with her results. “I have had knee, leg and shoulder problems for over 10 years. The pain has deprived me of sleep for months!

Ronald D. TX explains, “The results were noticeable overnight. I had more energy and was able to focus more readily.”

BEET & BERRY COMBO BOOSTS N-O

Neo 40 daily proprietary combination of N-O boosting nutrients: amino acids, B Vitamins, Vitamin C, and Magnesium are specially formulated with the patent pending combination of red beet and hawthorn berry. The natural chemistry between them generates Nitric Oxide when dissolved in the mouth. The result is increased oxygen delivery, improved vascular function, enhanced sexual enjoyment, and protection against free radicals.

BOOST BLOOD FLOW & OXYGEN STARTING IN 20 MINUTES!

“I recommend this lozenge because it helps the body restore N-O, which leads to healthy circulation; for most in as little as 20 minutes,” affirms Dr. Bryan. The result is increased oxygen delivery, heightened immune function, improved vascular function, and enhanced sexual enjoyment

'Starter schools' slated for 2016

Makeshift schools?
Critics call Prentice election pledge into question

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Alberta's new premier confirmed a slate of "starter schools" for suburban Calgary communities seeing major student growth Monday, but critics are questioning whether they will accommodate the needs of students and accusing Jim Prentice of reneging on a campaign promise.

The total commitment of $30.6 million falls short of the $43-million ask from the Calgary Board of Education in June for series of stop-gap measures in areas due for schools over the longer term. But Prentice said he was confident the project would be seen through in its entirety.

Prentice praised the CBE for getting its request in quickly but said the "starter school" model could be an option for other boards struggling under the weight of rapid immigration to the province.

"We're going to have to get these schools built and they're needed immediately," Prentice said.

List of approved projects

Starter schools: Approved for the communities of Aspen Woods, Cranston, Saddle Ridge and West Springs. Alberta Education Minister Gordon Dirks said each will house 300-350 students.

- Modulars: Eight to be installed at Westgate School, has the potential to prevent Spanish-learning students there from having to spend a year at Viscount Bennett Centre.
- Design work: To be completed in advance of approval for funding a high school in Calgary's facility-strapped southeast. The Calgary Board of Education hopes such work will allow the building to completed more quickly once dollars become available.

Newly minted Alberta Education Minister Gordon Dirks said the starter facilities are due to open sometime between January and March 2016 and students would move in during the middle of the school year.

But opposition members criticized the plan, especially after Dirks revealed the facilities would lack typical gymnasiums and libraries. Some "activity space" would be reserved in each facility for recreation and books, a spokesperson clarified.

Alberta Education Minister Gordon Dirks, seen Monday, says the starter school model has been used before in Calgary. JEREMY NOLAIS/METRO

Wildrose MLA Jeff Wilson recalled a pledge from Prentice that was quoted in the Edmonton Journal in late May in which the then-candidate for premier said, "In the Alberta that I lead, our children will not be housed in makeshift schools."

Wilson said the province is likely to miss the September 2016 target for having 50 new schools ready and is now trying to cram kids into inadequate facilities.

"This is not going to be a (student) experience that Mr. Prentice, I would say, is going to be proud of," he said.

Concerns remain

Bittersweet for parents

Construction timelines and the lack of common facilities like a library were among the concerns listed by parents affected by Monday's announcement.

Jan Waymark-Nicholson, a mother in West Springs, said the planned timeline for a modular-style school in her community will do nothing to prevent the move of Grade 6 students from the crammed elementary school already in place.

She isn't keen on pulling her son in the middle of the school year and shipping him to a starter site when it opens in early 2016.

"It's two schools in one year for him, which sucks all around," she said.

Mother Lisa Davis and others have lobbied to prevent Spanish students at the Westgate School from transferring between four facilities in four years. Monday's announcement helped, but she said infrastructure is still lacking.

"Our kids really are in crisis," Davis said.

Snow-tember. City blazes ahead with tree clearing

The visible signs of Snow-tember are disappearing off city streets almost as fast as they appeared.

City crews made significant progress over the weekend in some of the hardest-hit communities, according to city officials.

"We started on Saturday in the communities with the greatest amount of damage from the storm and are already making great progress," said Nico Bernard, manager at Parks Tactical Operations Centre.

"Our goal is to do one complete sweep of the streets and lanes in all storm-affected communities to remove as much debris as possible before the next snowfall."

Bernard clarified that "sweep" didn't mean actual street sweeping but simply making sure all communities had been cleared of fallen trees and branches.

The City of Calgary's 311 line received more than 47,000 calls during the September snowstorm — the largest number of calls ever received for a single event, even surpassing the number of calls from last year's flood.

As of Monday, city landfills have collected 7.6 million kilograms of tree debris for mulching. City landfills will continue to accept drop-offs of tree debris free of charge.

Return in December

Council delays secondary-suite motion for report

Calgary council put off a Monday vote on a contentious plan to legalize secondary suites in four inner-city wards and near major transit stops city-wide, pending a new report from city staff.

Rather than putting it to an up-or-down vote, Coun. Druh Farell asked to package the proposal she has championed with a broader study into the effect of opening more parts of the city to secondary suites.

That report is due back to council in December.

Farrell's proposal, which bears the signatures of three other councillors and the mayor, would legalize secondary suites in Wards 7, 8, 9 and 11 and within a 600-metre radius of LRT and major bus stops across Calgary. ROBSON FLETCHER/METRO

Skate parks won't be built this year

Construction bids way over budget. Advocacy group laments long wait for new facilities

JEREMY NOLAIS
jeremy.nolais@metronews.ca

Plans for three new skateboard parks in Calgary are grinding to a halt — for this year at least.

City officials had hoped to establish two "neighbourhood skate parks" to complement an existing year-round facility — Shaw Millennium Park — in the communities of Huntington Hills and Southwood. They also planned a smaller "skate spot" to serve the areas of Chinook Park, Kelvin Grove and Eagle Ridge. Construction was due to begin in August.

But Greg Steinraths, manager of sport development and partnerships for the city, said the bids from potential builders came in "substantially over" the $1.7 million allotted for the project.

"We have to be accountable stewards for the taxpayers' dollar and we want to get the maximum value for our citizens," he said, adding, "Recreation is so committed to these (parks) and they're going to be a great part of our infrastructure when we move forward."

Steinraths said the plan now is to re-tender the parks in early 2015 and hopefully have the sites ready later in the year. The city will also host public engagements concerning five similar facilities — planned for Bowness, Edgemont, New Brighton, Deer Run and Midnapore — and could look at offering all eight sites as a package to a single builder.

When asked about the steep bids, Steinraths said construction work appears to be picking up in the province. Still, he remained confident in the progress made.

"From where we got started in 2014, we're much further ahead," Steinraths insisted.

But Zev Klymochko with the Calgary Association of Skateboarding Enthusiasts said the delay was "disappointing," noting it's been three years since the city's skateboard amenities strategy was developed.

"It's something we thought was a lock for this year, that we'd be skating new parks," he said. "To get hit with this, it's like one thing after another it seems."

Calgary councillors walk into a bar ...

And they can't expense the booze. New rules brought forward by Coun. Diane Colley-Urquhart mean councillors can no longer bill taxpayers for alcohol

They can expense NHL tickets and food and flights and electronics and gifts for their staff but, as of Monday, Calgary city councillors can no longer add alcohol to the taxpayers' bill.

Well, there are a few exceptions.

By a 10-2 vote Monday, council opted to apply the same standards to themselves that currently apply to city staff. That means no expense claims for booze at events where only city employees or members of council are present, unless that event is an "appreciation event" hosted by a member of council "for volunteers and/or members of the public service."

Coun. Diane Colley-Urquhart brought the new rules forward, noting council has insisted city staff abide by them since 2010, and saying members of council should practise what they preach.

The two votes in opposition came from Coun. Shane Keating and Coun. Jim Stevenson.

"It's a knee-jerk reaction." Stevenson said. "It's a headline getter, but I think we're reacting to something that's not a problem."

Councillor expense claims are routinely published, he added, and extravagant or inappropriate charges of any kind will be exposed. Coun. Druh Farrell, however, welcomed the stricter booze rules.

"I've been complaining about this issue for a number of years to no avail," she said. "It certainly hasn't been taken seriously."

Coun. Sean Chu also supported the changes, although he said it's not really an issue for him personally.

"I don't drink alcohol because my life is already intoxicating enough," Chu said.

Calgary police working with Interpol to track man wanted in 2008 murder

Calgary police continue to search for a murder suspect named as part of a five-year operation that targeted not only gang members who committed serious crimes in the city, but also those calling the shots behind the scenes.

The efforts of the five-year Operation Desino were made public in July 2013 and included the arrests of two men and additional charges against another two already behind bars.

But a fifth man, 33-year-old Timothy Matthew Chan, remains at large. Police said in a release Monday they have yet to track down Chan but are working with Interpol to do so.

Chan is being sought in connection with the murder of Keven Steven Anaya, 21, in August 2008. Anaya was walking up to a home in the 1000 block of Marcombe Drive NE when he was shot by people inside a passing vehicle. Those same occupants then got out of the car, walked up to Anaya and fired more shots at him. Anaya died on scene. Chan is charged with first-degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder.

Timothy Matthew Chan

Chan is also known to have connections in Edmonton and Vancouver. However, police said that "it is possible Chan is no longer in Canada and operating under an assumed name."

Chan is Asian, stands 5'7" tall and weighs about 170 lbs. Investigators have learned that Chan was living in Toronto's west-end with his wife and toddler when the warrants for his arrest were issued in July 2013.

Animal and Bylaw Services officers have laid charges against a city dog owner after a woman was bitten and suffered "serious facial injuries."

The incident occurred early last Thursday at a home in Radisson Heights. ABS officers were called on reports that a woman had been badly injured by a dog.

The dog, a pit bull is now in ABS custody, and it will now undergo an assessment follwong a mandatory 10-day quarantine.

The dog's owner faces charges of attacking causing severe injury, and for having an unlicensed dog.

The maximum penalty is $10,000 and the dog could be euthanized. METRO

Not suspects. Two women sought in weekend assault

Calgary police are hoping to identify two women they believe have information about a weekend assault.

On Sunday afternoon, a man was brought to Peter Lougheed Centre suffering from severe injuries to his head and face.

Police say the women they're seeking are not considered suspects, but were seen driving a white, newer-model Chrysler convertible with a black soft top in the area of the hospital.

The first woman is described as light-skinned with long blond hair and a slim build. She was wearing a black T-shirt, ripped black leggings, a skirt and dangling suspenders.

The second is described as aboriginal with long black hair and a medium build. She was wearing white sunglasses, a white and black patterned sun dress and cowboy boots. METRO

Brothers to show off their silver-screen bling for CIFF

Jewel Fools. Local filmmaking duo describe their self-funded film as a mix of action, comedy, musical and Bollywood

calgary@metronews.ca

Two Calgary brothers hope their low-budget cinematic effort shows people they're diamonds in the rough behind the camera.

Set in the city of Calgary, the film Jewel Fools takes viewers into a seedy criminal underworld in attempts to recover the lead character's stolen engagement ring that holds great sentimental value.

Young filmmakers and Calgary brothers Bhaveek and Jashan Makan self-funded the film with a budget of $2,000 and will be debuting the film Wednesday during the Calgary International Film Festival.

"I am so scared, and so nervous," joked Bhaveek, who said they are only used to screening their movies for their friends, not hundreds of strangers.

Both in their early 20s, it took the duo more than a year to complete the film, funding it with their summer jobs and freelance film work, and with minimal video equipment.

While their biggest concern is hearing negative feedback about their film, they are also excited to hear some constructive criticism to help push them forward in their careers in film — although they already won the "Young Renegade Award" for a film in 2009.

"It's good because we will learn for next time," said Bhaveek.

Bhaveek calls the film a mix of action, comedy, musical and Bollywood and says it will be competing for CIFF awards against films with "million-dollar budgets."

Brothers Jashan and Bhaveek Makan are set to debut their self-funded film Jewel Fools on Wednesday night at Eau Claire Cineplex, as part of the Calgary International Film Festival. CANDICE WARD/FOR METRO

Blunt commentary. Pro-pot Alaskan TV reporter quits abruptly on-air

A television reporter revealed during a live on-air segment that she owns a medical marijuana business and was quitting her job to advocate for the drug ahead of a November ballot initiative to legalize the recreational use of pot in Alaska.

After reporting on the Alaska Cannabis Club on Sunday night's broadcast, KTVA's Charlo Greene identified herself as the business's owner.

"Everything you've heard is why I, the actual owner of the Alaska Cannabis Club, will be dedicating all my energy toward fighting for freedom and for fairness, which begins with legalizing marijuana here in Alaska," she said. She then used an expletive to quit her job and walked off-camera.

In a statement on KTVA's website, news director Bert Rudman apologized for Greene's inappropriate language and said she was terminated.

Alaska business records indicate Charlene Egbe registered the business name on April 20, or 4-20. The number 420 has long been associated with marijuana, though its origins as shorthand for pot are unclear. KTUU reported Greene was Egbe's professional name.

Taylor Bickford, a spokesman for a group backing the measure, said he hopes voters look beyond Greene's language.

"I hope that her language, which clearly was not appropriate for television, doesn't distract from the importance of her message," said Bickford, with the Campaign to Regulate Marijuana Like Alcohol.

A spokeswoman for the opposition group Big Marijuana Big Mistake said it has twice complained to KTVA management about what it claimed was Greene's biased coverage of the ballot initiative.

"While we are frustrated with these actions, we are further disappointed by this distraction from what needs to be a full and honest debate about a dangerous initiative that will hurt Alaska's communities and kids," Kristina Woolston said in a statement. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lululemon founder forced to remove mural

Graffiti violation. Chip Wilson's wall mural was found to break Vancouver's graffiti bylaws

emily.jackson@metronews.ca

Chip Wilson may be known for billion-dollar ideas, but commissioning a mural without a city permit wasn't one of them.

The Lululemon founder had to paint over the mural he commissioned for the wall below his $54-million oceanfront home after the city ruled the artwork wasn't up to snuff.

Wilson paid local graffiti artists to create the mural in October 2013 in an effort to stop unwanted graffiti.

But the city began investigating the mural after a neighbour inquired whether the Wilsons received a permit for the artwork. They hadn't.

The city reviewed the mural and found it didn't meet city requirements for preventing graffiti, according to an unattributed statement from the city's communications department.

The city met with a representative from the property in late July to see whether Wilson could "bring the mural into compliance." Instead, he painted over the sections that didn't meet the city's standards.

The whitewashed wall beside the foreshore has since been tagged with the phrase, "The City of Vancouver: Consistently Opposing the Arts."

But there's still a chance the wall could get a makeover.

The city and Wilson are continuing the discussion about the possibility of a "city compliant mural" at the location, according to the city's statement.

Lululemon's Chip Wilson commissioned a mural on the wall seen above, a mural which ultimately violated Vancouver's graffiti laws. It has since been tagged with a message criticizing the city's stance on graffiti. GRAPEFRUIT1/REDDIT

Fresh new brew. Starbucks' coffee-beer pilot project underway

There's a new coffee in town — and it tastes like beer. Or a pint of Guinness to be more precise.

As reported by Buzzfeed and a handful of Twitter users, Starbucks is pilot testing a Dark Barrel Latte made with a blend of espresso, chocolate stout-flavored syrup and steamed milk, all topped with whipped cream and a dark caramel sauce.

The alcohol-free drink is reportedly being trialled in Columbus, Ohio, and parts of Florida. So far reactions on Twitter have been mixed.

"Dark Barrel Latte is cozy but not sweet — like a bonfire on a chilly autumn night. @Starbucks please keep it around!" tweeted one fan.

But those who may not be able to stomach the idea of drinking a beer-like beverage for breakfast may want to heed another customer's review:

"The Dark Barrel Latte at Starbucks literally tastes like drinking a Guinness in the early morning ... so yuck," wrote one customer. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Lawyer hopes to appeal ruling that province is not liable for moose-related car crashes

A Newfoundland lawyer who lost his bid to hold the province liable for moose-vehicle crashes hopes a panel of appeal court judges will see the case differently.

Ches Crosbie said Monday he will appeal a provincial Supreme Court ruling that dismissed the class-action lawsuit he spearheaded that involved 135 plaintiffs and 15 estates.

"The suffering that the members of the class have undergone has public sympathy," Crosbie said at a news conference, flanked by plaintiffs and supporters. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Afghan soldiers caught at U.S.-Canada border

Training exercise.
Three army officers who disappeared from U.S. base on Cape Cod weren't considered a threat to the public

Three Afghan National Army officers who went missing during a training exercise at a Cape Cod military base were detained Monday at the U.S.-Canadian border, Massachusetts law enforcement officials said.

Massachusetts state police were notified that the three were being questioned by federal authorities at Rainbow Bridge, which connects Niagara Falls, N.Y., and Niagara Falls, Ont., said spokesman David Procopio, who did not have further details.

There was no immediate comment from the Pentagon.

U.S. Customs and Border Protection officials in Niagara Falls said they didn't have the men in custody. Messages left for Canada Border Services Agency weren't immediately returned.

Military officials said the Afghan soldiers had been participating in a U.S. Central Command Regional Cooperation training exercise at Joint Base Cape Cod. They arrived at Camp Edwards on Sept. 11 and were last seen Saturday at the Cape Cod Mall in Hyannis during an off day.

The soldiers were reported missing by base security personnel Saturday night. They were identified as Maj. Jan Mohammad Arash, Capt. Mohammad Nasir Askarzada and Capt. Noorullah Aminyar.

Gov. Deval Patrick, who had been briefed over the weekend on the situation, said earlier Monday that the military did not believe the three soldiers posed a danger to the public.

"They were vetted by the military. They were cleared by the military," Patrick told reporters while he visited a preschool program in Quincy.

Army Col. Steve Warren, a Pentagon spokesman, said earlier that 14 Afghans taking part in the Cape Cod military exercise were "thoroughly vetted" prior to coming to the U.S., so officials do not believe they are a threat.

The Regional Co-operation training exercises have been held annually since 2004 to promote co-operation and interoperability among forces, build functional capacity, practice peacekeeping operations and enhance readiness.

This year's exercise, which involves more than 200 participants from six nations including the U.S., is scheduled to wrap up Wednesday. Military officials from Tajikistan, Pakistan, Kazakhstan and Mongolia are also participants. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PM vows to do more to fight terrorism after ISIS threat against Canadians

The Conservative government intends to do more to counter Islamic extremism, Prime Minister Stephen Harper said Monday in response to a new threat levelled directly at Canada.

The Islamic State of Iraq and al-Sham (ISIS) issued a new audio recording over the weekend urging supporters to kill westerners — military or civilian — from countries involved in the battle against ISIS in Iraq, including "Canadians."

Security agencies have been tracking these events for some time, Harper said.

"We have, as you know, strengthened laws in this country to deal with these kinds of threats," he said.

"We are currently in the process of examining these laws and examining other means we may have to monitor and to take action against both organizations and individuals who may undertake activities that are potentially threatening to Canadians."

Man pleads guilty in high-profile Halifax child pornography case

'People should say her name'. Second charge of distributing child porn dropped; mother of victim wants mandatory publication ban lifted

The mother of a teenage girl victimized in a prominent child pornography case said she felt a measure of comfort Monday after one of the accused pleaded guilty, but she also believes her daughter's story is not getting the attention it deserves because of a statutory publication ban.

"I do feel some solace in that she just wanted to be validated," the mother said after one of two young men charged in the case in Halifax pleaded guilty to making child pornography. "She wanted … people to know that this actually happened to her instead of being blamed for … (it)."

But the mother said a mandatory publication ban, which prevents her now-deceased daughter from being identified, has effectively silenced her.

"The reason she came forward and she was brave and told her story is because she didn't want the silence," the mother said outside youth court. "She's no longer here, so I don't agree with it at all, and I do feel that people should say her name."

The Crown dropped a second charge of distributing child pornography against the accused, who is now 20 but cannot be named under the Youth Criminal Justice Act because the offence occurred when he was 17.

Bullied

The girl died after she was taken off life-support following a suicide attempt in the spring of 2013. Her family says she was bullied for months as a result of the photo.

Based on an agreed statement of facts read into the court record by Crown lawyer Alexander Smith, the teen girl, then 15, went to the accused's house where she, a friend and four male youths drank alcohol in the fall of 2011.

Smith said the accused took a photograph later that night, with his cellphone camera of one of the male youths having sex with the girl while she was vomiting. She was unaware that the picture was being taken and did not give consent to it, Smith said.

After the accused was arrested in the summer of 2013, he told police that he sent the photograph to the male youth who had sex with the girl the next day, Smith said. The accused is not alleged to have sent the photograph to anyone else, but the image was distributed to numerous people, most of whom attended the same high school the girl did.

The girl's case generated international headlines since last year. But in May, a judge upheld a publication ban under the Criminal Code that prohibits the identification of victims in child pornography cases. THE CANADIAN PRESS

'Full support.' UN member states endorse rights of all indigenous peoples

The United Nations General Assembly on Monday approved a document outlining the rights of indigenous peoples worldwide.

The Outcome Document was endorsed by consensus at the start of the first World Conference on Indigenous Peoples.

The gathering brought together more than 1,000 delegates from indigenous communities along with various heads of state and UN officials.

Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said indigenous people are "central to our discourse of human rights and global development" and have an important role in the push for a more sustainable use of natural resources. Ban said indigenous people have the "full support" of the UN. He welcomed delegates with greetings in indigenous languages from Latin America, South Africa, New Zealand, Malaysia, North America, Norway and Sweden.

Turkey facing 'wave' of Kurdish refugees

Fleeing ISIS.
In the past four days, approximately 130,000 Kurds have crossed over from Syria

Riot police use water cannons to disperse Kurdish demonstrators who were clashing with Turkish security forces as thousands of refugees continued to arrive at the border in Suruc, Turkey, on Monday. Some 130,000 refugees fleeing the ISIS advance into the Kurdish region of Syria have entered Turkey since late last week. BURHAN OZBILICI/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some 130,000 Kurdish refugees fleeing Islamic militants have crossed the border from Syria into Turkey in the past four days, Turkey's deputy prime minister said Monday as fighting raged close to Turkey's southern border.

The minister, Numan Kurtulmus, warned that Turkey was facing "a refugee wave that can be expressed by hundreds of thousands."

"This is not a natural disaster ... what we are faced with is a man-made disaster," Kurtulmus said of the surge of mostly women, children and the elderly that started late Thursday.

The situation has raised tensions between Turkish authorities and Kurds, who claim the government is hampering their efforts to help their brethren in Syria by refusing to let Turkish Kurds cross into Syria.

New clashes Monday erupted along the border near the town of Suruc, with Turkish police firing tear gas and water cannons to disperse Kurds protesting the government or demanding to reach Syria.

"We don't know how many more villages may be raided, how many more people may be forced to seek refuge," Kurtulmus said. "An uncontrollable force at the other side of the border is attacking civilians."

Suruc itself was flooded with refugees and armoured military vehicles.

The Islamic State of Iraq and al-Sham (ISIS), an al-Qaida breakaway group, says it has established an Islamic state, or caliphate, ruled by a harsh version of Islamic law in territory it captured straddling the Syria-Iraq border. ISIS militants recently advanced into the Kurdish regions of Syria that border Turkey.

Turkey had previously been reluctant to take part in international efforts against the group, citing the safety of 49 citizens taken hostage in June when the Islamic group overran the Iraqi city of Mosul.

But on Saturday, Turkey secured the hostages' release but would not say how. President Recep Tayyip Erdogan has denied paying a ransom but has been vague on whether there was a prisoner swap.

The conflict in Syria had already pushed more than a million people over the border since it began in March 2011.

Refugees on Sunday reported atrocities by Islamic fighters that included stonings, beheadings and the torching of homes.

Turkish President Recep Tayyib Erdogan indicated Monday his country may have traded ISIS prisoners for Turkish hostages.

- Negotiated release. Altogether 49 hostages were released by ISIS Saturday. Of the released hostages, 46 were Turks while three were Iraqis.
- Months-long process. Erdogan indicated the negotiation of the hostages' release lasted 102 days. He has not, however, fully disclosed the details of their release.

White House fence-scaling incident. Investigators found ammo, weapons in accused's car: Prosecutor

Investigators found more than 800 rounds of ammunition, a machete and two hatchets in the car of the former soldier accused of scaling the White House fence and sprinting inside while carrying a knife, a U.S. prosecutor said Monday. President Barack Obama was "obviously concerned" about the weekend incident, spokesman Josh Earnest said.

Omar J. Gonzalez, 42, faces charges of entering a restricted building or grounds while carrying a deadly or dangerous weapon. He had been arrested earlier in the summer in the nearby state of Virginia with a carful of weapons, authorities said, and a federal prosecutor said Monday in court that Gonzalez had a map then with the White House circled.

Authorities ran into Gonzalez again, less than a month ago on Aug. 25, when he was stopped while walking along the south fence of the White House, his car parked nearby. He had a hatchet in a rear waistband but no firearms, a federal prosecutor said at Monday's hearing. Gonzalez gave permission to search his car and was not arrested.

Friday evening, Obama and his family had left the White House for Camp David when the incident occurred. Gonzalez was seized just inside the building's front door. No guns were found in his car.

In court, Gonzalez listened impassively as the prosecutor spoke. He could face up to 10 years in prison if convicted of illegally entering a restricted area with a dangerous weapon.

The Army said he served from 1997 until his discharge in 2003, and again from 2005 to December 2012, when he retired due to disability.

At the federal court hearing, Assistant U.S. Attorney David Mudd said Gonzalez already was under indictment in southwestern Virginia, accused of having a sawed-off shotgun and trying to elude police this summer. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

New Zealand PM wants vote on changing country's flag

A controversial issue. Newly elected PM John Key wants New Zealanders to decide whether they want a new flag for the country

NICK PERRY/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Fresh off a big election win, New Zealand Prime Minster John Key said Monday that he wants the nation to vote next year on changing its flag.

Key told television station TV3 that he wants to quickly initiate the process of holding a national referendum.

"I'd like that issue dealt with in 2015," he said. "New Zealanders either need to decide yes or no."

Some in New Zealand consider the flag to be an unwanted relic from a colonial past, while others feel a deep attachment to it.

The flag depicts the Southern Cross star constellation and includes Britain's Union Jack in the top left corner. Opponents say it's too similar to Australia's flag and doesn't reflect New Zealand's independence from Britain.

When Key first raised the idea of a flag vote in March, he said he favoured changing the design to a silver fern set against a black background, an image that's popular among New Zealand's sports teams, including the national rugby squad, known as the All Blacks.

Some say that design would equate the country too much with its sporting heroes, or would be too reminiscent of a pirate ensign. And such a flag would not make reference to the nation's indigenous Maori, who some say should be represented in any new design.

Among those who support retaining the flag are the Returned and Services Association group, which represents former military personnel.

Key told TV3 that other priorities for his upcoming term include continuing to grow the economy, enacting changes to the education system, and getting people off welfare and into work. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Election win

Key's centre-right National Party won 48 per cent of the vote in provisional results from Saturday's election, giving it a third term in office and an outright majority in Parliament.

- The election result was disastrous for the liberal Labour Party, which won just 25 per cent of the vote, its worst showing in more than 90 years.
- Labour Party leader David Cunliffe told reporters Monday that he doesn't intend to resign but does want the party to take a leadership vote so he's either given a mandate to continue or is replaced.

Journalists inspired to spread the word

World Vision

If not for pure luck, that could be any one of us, says reporter

Tyler Hall shows off the day's work with local baker Glenda.

It can take a lot to shock reporters. But when a radio DJ, a reporter, and a video journalist travelled to Guatemala this past summer, they were shocked and saddened to see how poverty created dire living conditions for children.

Tyler Hall, Danny Baldassarre, and David Ewasuk — who all work in Alberta's media industry — visited communities where World Vision Canada is working to alleviate poverty and injustice for children, their families, and their communities.

In a country of more than 14,647,000 people, two-thirds of Guatemalans survive through subsistence farming, but often times fall short of having enough food.

Baldassarre, a video journalist/producer, recalls the moment that put things into perspective for him: "Cecilia was her name. She walked an hour every morning to cut fire wood, and another hour back, to cook rice or whatever she could scrounge up for her kids."

Contrast this to the dollars and hours Canadians spend annually in the drive-thru for their morning coffee, says Baldassarre, and you realize that many of us have the means to help.

And this help goes a long way for children, like Jairo, a 15-year-old boy sponsored by a family in Calgary. "This family in Calgary decided one day to get with World Vision and now this boy has a better life, and one day, his children will have a better life," says Hall, DJ for 98.5 Virgin Radio.

Hall, Baldassarre, and Ewasuk saw a host of World Vision programs aimed at reducing poverty, such as a bakery that employs local residents, giving them the income needed to care for their families.

In a country plagued by organized crime and street gangs, children's safety is extremely important as well. An after school program funded by sponsorship is keeping kids off of dangerous streets, and giving them a safe space to play.

Ewasuk, a reporter, hopes that by bringing these kinds of stories to Canadians, he'll be able to inspire them to lend a hand. "You're only separated by the people who live in poverty by a few steps," he says, "If not for pure luck, it could be you or I living there."

Spoiler alert! Canadians are more polite than Americans about spoilers

Sorry about that spoiler, eh?

According to a study conducted by Netflix, Canadians are characteristically polite about trying to avoid spoiling a TV show for their friends and family.

But most say they've had to apologize in the past for blurting out too much about an exciting plot point.

Meanwhile, Americans were twice as likely to think they should be able to talk about a new episode of their favourite TV show any time they want.

"(Canadians speak about spoilers) with a certain delicacy ... and they are accommodating with one another with a fine touch when it comes to social interactions," says Vancouver native Grant McCracken, a cultural anthropologist who has worked with Netflix to examine viewership trends.

"Americans, in maybe that characteristically American way ... get to that diplomatic moment, they start to code things (during conversations), but they go, 'This is stupid, let's let fly.' " THE CANADIAN PRESS

In an online poll of 1,506 Canadians conducted for Netflix by Leger Marketing, 69 per cent of the respondents said they had accidentally spoiled a show for someone in the past.

General Motors. Death toll continues to rise due to faulty ignition switches

The death toll from crashes involving General Motors small cars with faulty ignition switches is at least 21.

Attorney Kenneth Feinberg, who was hired by the company to compensate victims, said Monday in an Internet posting that he received 143 death claims as of Friday, and 21 of those have been deemed eligible for payments.

The defective switches can unexpectedly move to the "accessory" or "off" positions, shutting down the engine and knocking out power steering and brakes. With engines shut off, people can lose control of their cars and crash. If that happens, the air bags won't inflate.

GM has admitted knowing about the problem for more than a decade in small cars such as the Chevrolet Cobalt. Yet it didn't begin recalling the 2.6 million small cars until February.

For months, the company said at least 13 people died in crashes linked to the faulty switches, but GM acknowledged that the death toll would go higher. Some lawmakers have estimated that it's close to 100. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Save the Earth ... one 3D printer at a time?

Andrew Finkle and Charles Mire, the co-founders of Canadian startup Structur3D, show off the 3D-printer adapter they used to create a New York Yankees logo out of Nutella at the Maker Faire festival in Queens, N.Y., on Sept. 21. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Going green.

A Waterloo, Ont., business promoting its 3D printer in NYC argues the product can be good for the environment

While hundreds of thousands of people marched against climate change in New York City, across town, two young Canadian entrepreneurs displayed an invention they hope might put a little dent in the global carbon footprint.

The business partners from Waterloo, Ont., took home a couple of the judges' ribbons at a technology fair Sunday afternoon, as they showed off an adapter that allows home-style 3D printers to work with additional materials.

Hooked up to one of these syringe-like contraptions, they say, a home unit is no longer confined to just printing plastic. Suddenly, a high-tech do-it-yourselfer's repertoire might include ceramic, wood filler, clay, hydrogels — pretty much any viscous substance that can be squeezed through a little tube, at room temperature.

"Are you 3D-printing Nutella?!" one woman burst out as she arrived at the display stand for Structur3D.

Yes, in fact, they were.

Playing to the local crowd, they had even set up a 3D printer to draw a chocolatey replica of a New York Yankees logo.

About 85,000 people attended the weekend event in Queens, organizers said. Across the East River, a much bigger crowd was marching in Manhattan to put pressure on governments on the eve of a United Nations climate summit.

Mire made the point that his $379 gizmo also has serious applications, beyond Nutella spreads. One of those happens to be environmental — a buy-local movement, if you will, narrowed down to your own house. "It's one less trip (people) have to make to the store. It's one less thing they have to order off of the Internet," Mire said. "They can use locally sourced materials or make things in their own homes. In a way, it really could reduce carbon footprints on a cumulative level.... So it's just a small contribution, on a very large problem." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Big Tobacco case enters final leg

Final arguments are underway in a landmark case pitting Quebec smokers against Big Tobacco.

The $17.8-billion lawsuit is believed to be the biggest class action ever seen in Canada.

An estimated one million Quebecers are involved in the lawsuit, which is targeting three major Canadian tobacco manufacturers. Closing arguments are expected to last several weeks and a decision isn't expected for some time. THE CANADIAN PRESS

FASHIONABLE PEOPLE WEARING QUESTIONABLE THINGS

SHE SAYS

Jessica Napier
metronews.ca

I would never say that I was bullied in high school, but I do have a vivid memory of one particular Mean Girl moment. I must have been about 13 or 14 when a classmate cornered me at my locker, looked my body up and down and asked: Why do you dress like that?

I think she was referring to my attempt at early-2000s European street style, a look that didn't exactly translate at my suburban Canadian high school. But despite her harsh disapproving attitude I have to admit it was an interesting question. Why did I choose to dress like that? Why do any of us buy and wear certain types of clothing, and why do other people care?

The question of why we wear what we do is the subject of a new book edited by Toronto author Sheila Heti in collaboration with Leanne Shapton, Heidi Julavits and Mary Mann. Women in Clothes includes contributions from 639 women — writers, fashion industry insiders, famous types and normal people — exploring our emotional attachment to clothing. The book features a diverse array of perspectives that were crowd-sourced through personal interviews and an online style survey.

I'm sure some people would dismiss such a compilation as superficial frippery — who really needs to read 500-plus pages on getting dressed? But I think there's great value in understanding how women from all walks of life present themselves to the world through their clothes.

Magazine editors like to write about "statement pieces," but every piece of clothing we own sends a message, even if it's understated. Clothes tell a story about who we are and how our personalities, lifestyles and bodies change over time.

Wardrobes are tangible scrapbooks filled with mundane and momentous items: bathing suits, pyjama pants, pencil skirts, Bridal gowns, maternity dresses, underwear and so much more.

And then there are the clothes that got away: the expensive pair of high heels you just couldn't justify buying, the earring that fell down the drain never to be seen again, or the one-of-a-kind leather jacket you accidentally abandoned in a restaurant coat check. I don't follow fashion week runway shows or trend reports, but I do love clothes. I am always curious about the changing shapes, cuts, colours and varieties. Most of all, I'm inspired by the ways in which other women choose to wear their clothes, from the professionally chic fashion blogger in my Instagram feed to the stylish woman waiting for bus alongside me in the morning.

I'm happy to look back at those cringe-worthy photographs in my high school yearbook because I'd rather be occasionally embarrassed than always play it safe in basics.

Why not take an experimental approach to dressing and try on different styles and trends? Saying "I can't pull it off," is the most absurd sartorial statement anyone can make. Of course you can pull it off — all you have to do is put it on.

When it comes to answering the question of why we dress the way we do, there's no singular answer. Style is determined by a number of personal and cultural reasons. Clothes are functional, but they can also be fun and experimental and yes, sometimes a big mistake.

NASA's Maven looks for clues to life, on Mars

NASA's Maven spacecraft entered orbit around Mars for an unprecedented study of the red planet's atmosphere, following a 710-million-kilometre journey that began nearly a year ago.

The robotic explorer successfully slipped into orbit around the red planet late Sunday night. Scientists believe the Martian atmosphere holds clues as to how Earth's neighbour went from being warm and wet, billions of years ago, to cold and dry. That early wet world may have harboured microbial life, a tantalizing question yet to be answered.

Director. Nicholas Stoller

Stars. Seth Rogen, Zac Efron, Rose Byrne

This bumpy comedy by Nicholas Stoller (Forgetting Sarah Marshall) finds mirth in how we're all just one life change away from curmudgeonhood. One minute you're smoking grass, the next you're screaming at "kids" to get off your lawn.

Seth Rogen and Rose Byrne, both in their early 30s, play the "old couple next door" to a group of wild frat boys led by Zac Efron, age 26.

Rogen's Mac and Byrne's Kelly are one-time ravers who are now parents of an adorable baby girl. All they want, as any parent would, is a little peace and quiet so their darling can sleep blissfully at night.

But that's not happening now that the local college frat boys of Delta Psi have moved next door. Cue mayhem as diaper changers and toga wearers collide. Hose off, repeat for occasional laughs.

Extras include an alternate opening, deleted/alternate scenes and making-of featurettes.

Brett Dalton knows he's the gent Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D. fans love to hate. "I get boos," he says.

As Agent Grant Ward he spent most of the show's first season as a gruff but good guy. Then in a late season development, it was revealed that he was actually a spy working for HYDRA, a criminal organization dedicated to global domination.

"I get some, 'I trusted you!' 'I feel betrayed.' 'My mother still believes in you!' I get the whole gamut. It's kind of all over the place for me. For the other actors it's more like, 'Oh my gosh, I love you on the show.' For me it's more like, 'I love-hate you.' I get a little of both.

"I think Ward is a character they love to hate. It's not boo against Brett Dalton, it's boo against the character."

The actor, who holds a masters degree from the Yale School of Drama, had no idea there were big changes in store for Agent Ward.

"I'm glad they didn't tell me," he says, "because I really would have tipped my hand. They told me the episode before and there were a couple of shoot days left and even in those shoot days it kind of did me in mentally because I was thinking, 'Am I listening like a spy? Am I giving too much away?' All I was doing was listening in the scene. Standing and listening. But the way in which I was listening, I wasn't so sure about."

The fan reaction to his character's double cross was swift.

"In the beginning some of the tweets were like, 'I want to punch @iambrettdalton in the face.' They didn't say Grant Ward, they tagged me and said they wanted to punch me in the face. I thought they could have just typed in Grant Ward."

As the show goes into its second season Dalton tips his hat to the fans. Without them the show wouldn't exist, literally.

When Agent Coulson, played by Clark Gregg, was killed by Loki in The Avengers movie it triggered a worldwide Coulson Lives crusade that inspired Marvel to create the show.

"The whole Coulson Lives campaign was started by the fans," he says, "and became this really fun, underground stencil that was seen around the world. Then Marvel got wind of it and decided to make a whole TV show around Coulson putting together a ragtag group of people trying to save the world each week.

"The show exists because of the fans. And that's the reason we have Season 2 as well, because we have such amazing fans who tune in each week and follow everything and are so eager about the whole thing. They're why we do what we do."

Ladies and gentlemen, Emma Watson is your new feminist icon.

The Harry Potter star and UN Goodwill Ambassador gave an impassioned speech at the United Nations headquarters this weekend to launch the HeForShe campaign, looking to help turn men into advocates as well.

"I decided that I was a feminist. This seemed uncomplicated to me. But my recent research has shown me that feminism has become an unpopular word. Women are choosing not to identify as feminists. Apparently, (women's expression is) seen as too strong, too aggressive, anti-men, unattractive," Watson said during her speech.

"Why has the word become such an unpopular one? I think it is right I am paid the same as my male counterparts. I think it is right that I should make decisions about my own body. I think it is right that women be involved on my behalf in the policies and decisions that affect my life. I think it is right that, socially, I am afforded the same respect as men."

I have no joke here but just wanted to point out that Watson is awesome. Although I was a little distracted by the presence of her ludicrously attractive brother seated behind her.

Mad Men pillow talk is secure, Hamm vows

While the rest of us have to wait until next year to find out how Mad Men ends, there is at least one person not working on the show who knows what happens: Jon Hamm's longtime girlfriend, Jennifer Westfeldt.

But don't expect her to spill anytime soon.

"Oh, she knows. I tell her everything," Hamm tells Us Weekly. "I tell her everything and she definitely knows. She won't tell anyone."

Perhaps series creator Matthew Weiner stands outside their window every night just to make sure.

Italian paparazzi pump ego for 'declining' star Stone

Sharon Stone is getting some bad buzz from the Italian filmmaking duo Pupi and Antonio Avati, with whom she worked on Golden Boy.

The Avati brothers recounted some diva-ish behaviour on Stone's part, brought on by the presence of paparazzi, according to the Hollywood Reporter.

"We brought her to the most luxurious suite of the Hassler Hotel. The next day on set, there were more than 200 paparazzi. There, her ego definitively inflated. It is the classic pattern with these American actresses who are slightly declining."

Ouch. And Pupi recalls her disappearing completely.

"My brother received a phone call from Los Angeles from her manager: She wouldn't come back on the set until the photographers ... had gone away."

A breath of awareness

Idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis. Rose McGowan got involved in the fight against the deadly disease after her father passed away

IZABELA SZYDLO
life@metronews.ca

Actress Rose McGowan holds a photo of her and her father, who died of IPF. CONTRIBUTED

For the last 22 years, actress Rose McGowan has entertained us on the silver and small screens. But playing Tatum in Scream or Paige on Charmed wouldn't compare in difficulty to the role she played when her father was diagnosed with idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis (IPF).

"It was definitely my realest role," says McGowan of being her father's caretaker during his fight with the fatal lung disease, which causes scarring that makes it increasingly difficult to breathe. "Breathing is so fundamental. So to have it bring you closer to dying every time you do it is horrifying."

After her father's death five years ago, McGowan became involved with the Coalition for Pulmonary Fibrosis and Daughters of Pulmonary Fibrosis in the U.S. She recently teamed up with the Canadian Pulmonary Fibrosis Foundation (CPFF) for its IPF Awareness Month, which McGowan says is a feat in itself.

"When I became involved, there was hardly a website," she says. "So, to designate September as IPF Awareness Month is huge. I think people are asking what it is a lot more. There are so many causes people can pay attention to but this one is really important, especially since it is crossing age lines."

Though about 15,000 Canadians are diagnosed and 5,000 die of IPF every year, little is known about the disease, including its origins. And while it generally hits those who are 50 or older, in 2011, Helene Campbell, a 20-year-old Canadian, was diagnosed.

Like many sufferers, Campbell, who appeared on Ellen after her organ-donor video went viral, was misdiagnosed with asthma. Other misdiagnoses include pneumonia or heart failure.

"It is common to be misdiagnosed because all the complaints sound like different things."

Symptoms include blue lips, dry cough, difficulty getting a full breath and uneasiness.

"I had never heard of it and neither had my dad; that's why it was such a shock. I went with him to the pulmonologist after he was misdiagnosed for about nine months and the doctor just shook his hand and said, 'I'm so sorry.'"

A terrible reality

"Breathing is so fundamental. So to have it bring you closer to dying every time you do it is horrifying."

Rose McGowan
on the progression of IPF.

As part of its efforts, CPFF launched a social media campaign called Kiss IPF Goodbye. For every share of the organization's videos and/or use of the hashtag #KissIPFGoodbye on Facebook, Twitter or Instagram, pharmaceutical company Boehringer Ingelheim will donate $5 for research.

Aside from educating the public, McGowan spends time with IPF patients and their caretakers. Having watched her father go from a "bear of a man who hiked trails everyday, was super active and a vegetarian" to being unable to walk up one stair caused a lot of confusion and frustration, she says.

"It was horrible seeing him go through it and it's so awkward because I look back and there's all these things I should have asked and said," she says. "I would say to anyone who has a sick loved one, just talk. There are also support groups for both patients and caretakers because it is exhausting."

McGowan is realistic about her expectations for short-term IPF research and says she hopes to see a treatment developed to slow the progress of the disease.

"To help people live better lives while they are here is really my goal," she says. "It's one of those things where people are like, 'I want to lend my voice and support' but for me, it's like, 'I want to lend some reality.' This is real and it's scary and it hurts. I want that to stop."

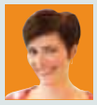
Lean and tender; what else could you ask for?



NUTRI-BITES
Theresa Albert

Loin is your secret password. It is and always will be the leanest cut of meat, despite your choice of animal.

Beef tenderloin, lamb loin, or pork tenderloin always come from beneath the ribs next to the backbone where fat rarely accumulates. Since it is an underused muscle it always stays tender.

Here are some tips for cooking it:

• Use a meat thermometer and don't cook past 140 F (even the pork!). It may still be a little pink.

• Season the loin well and roast at a high temperature (425 F) for a quick weeknight meal.

• It goes well with Asian flavours, Indian spices, or Mediterranean or Caribbean seasonings.

• Serve loin with something sweet like chutney or fruit compote.

• Bake a couple extra and use throughout the week. They're great in sandwiches, salads and stir frys.

• Some wrap it in bacon to add flavour and keep the meat extra moist.

Always allow tenderloin to rest before slicing. Five to eight minutes tented with foil should do it. The juices can run out if it's cut while still too hot and your meat may end up stringy. And no one but Tarzan wants string on their loin.

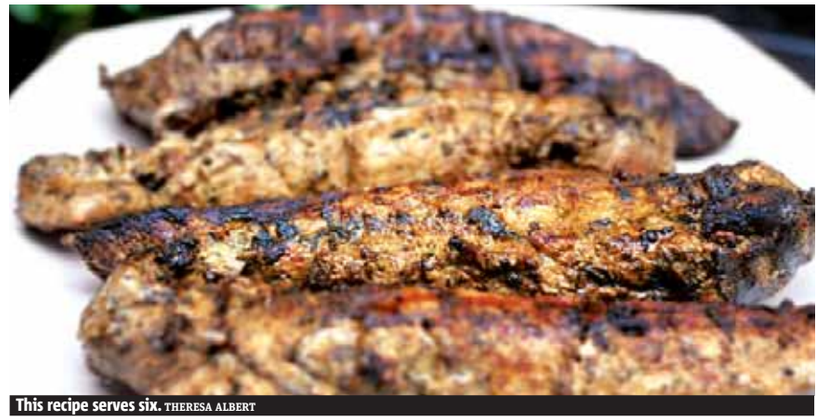
With sweet spices like clove, combined with savoury spices like garlic and thyme, this tenderloin is flavourful but lean.

It goes very will with fresh peaches, pears or apples on a simple salad for a low-carb or paleo dinner.

1. In a bowl combine all ingredients and add pork, turning to coat. Marinate in large freezer bag in fridge up to 24 hours or on counter for 10.

2. Place pork on greased grill over medium high heat and close lid. Cook 6 minutes, turn, cook 6 more minutes and turn again. Cook with lid down, except when turning. Alternatively, it can be cooked in oven at 450 F for 30-40 minutes until internal temp reaches 160 F.

3. Let stand for 5 minutes before cutting.



This recipe serves six. THERESA ALBERT

MBA courses offered on-campus and online

When it comes to getting an MBA, it may never seem like the right time.

The Thompson Rivers University (TRU) MBA makes it possible to find the time to get your MBA through flexible, online and part-time options.

"TRU offers the most flexible MBA program in Canada, allowing our students to achieve their goals while balancing work, family and other commitments in their lives," says Victoria Martin, director, MBA program, school of business and economics, Thompson Rivers University. "We do this by offering all our courses on-campus and online so that our students can choose the delivery method that works best for them."

TRU also allows part-time students to choose the course load that is manageable for them each semester instead of dictating a required part-time study pace.

Martin says MBA programs are designed to build off a student's previous work experience and to prepare graduates to advance their careers and take on leadership roles.

STUDY ANYWHERE IN THE COUNTRY

The Thompson Rivers University MBA online courses allow students to achieve their MBA from anywhere in Canada, opening up access to an MBA to students who live outside major centres or who travel for work.

Final examinations are scheduled at a testing centre in their local area and all other course work is conducted online.

MBA students tend to have been in the workforce for several years and many have family, volunteer or other commitments to maintain in addition to building their careers.

"The traditional two-year, full-time format of most MBA programs doesn't reflect the needs of many potential students to balance work and other life responsibilities with their studies, so we've designed our program to be responsive to this type of student by offering maximum flexibility but still maintaining a high level of academic rigour," Martin says.

CONTRIBUTED

The TRU MBA provides competency in all the major functional management areas of an organization, preparing graduates to manage effectively in today's complex and rapidly-changing business environment.

Students will gain the skills needed to confidently assume leadership roles and to have a strategic understanding of the global business environment.

Adding to weight of expectations

Sean Monahan. Young Flame flexing more muscle in sophomore season as he sets the bar even higher

Sean Monahan tallied 22 goals last season to become the first Flames rookie since Jarome Iginla in 1996-97 to top the 21-goal plateau. GETTY IMAGES FILE

With a few more pounds of muscle on his frame, Calgary Flames forward Sean Monahan looks ready to build on an impressive rookie season and avoid a sophomore slump.

Monahan scored 22 goals as a rookie last season and was fifth on the Flames with 34 points in 75 games.

It's easy to forget Monahan doesn't turn 20 until next month. At six-foot-two and 185 pounds, he cruises into the faceoff circle with a confident demeanour. He says he's about eight pounds heavier than his rookie weight.

"I focused on the stuff that I really needed to focus on, so I did a lot of strength training and explosive stuff and really focused on diet," Monahan said Monday in Calgary.

When Monahan turned up wearing a tight T-shirt at a summer hockey camp run by Bob Hartley, the Flames head coach did a double-take.

"He just said I look like a man," Monahan said. "I worked hard this summer so I think it's paid off. It obviously doesn't matter to me if other people notice it. It all comes down to me.

"Whatever work I put in, I feel it on the ice and I think that's the biggest thing."

Drafted sixth overall by the Flames in 2013, the centre from Brampton, Ont., had a legitimate shot at making a rebuilding Flames roster as an 18-year-old last fall.

But his offensive contributions outstripped expectations. Monahan was the first Flames rookie since Jarome Iginla in 1996-97 to score 21 goals.

Monahan did finish the season with a minus-20 rating, but few Flames were in the black in plus-minus on a team that finished 27th in a 30-team league.

Monahan put up impressive numbers despite a hairline fracture in his foot that kept him out seven straight games in November and December.

With top-line centre Mikael Backlund sidelined due to injury, Monahan averaged well over 18 minutes per game in the last five games of the regular season.

He was then invited to play for Canada at the world championships, where he had two assists in seven games, to pack even more experience into his rookie campaign.

"Suddenly he's more talkative. It's just part of feeling more confident," Hartley said. "Now he knows that he really has a spot on this team."

Sloppy Jets pay for their errors

In New Jersey. Cutler throws two TDs to Martellus Bennett

Monday Night Football

Bears	Jets
27	19

The Chicago Bears took advantage of early mistakes by the sloppy New York Jets.

Then they had to hold their breath before hanging on for a 27-19 victory Monday night.

Jay Cutler threw two touchdown passes to Martellus Bennett and Ryan Mundy returned an interception 45 yards for a score. Cutler finished 23 of 38 for 225 yards and Alshon Jeffery caught eight passes for 105 yards for the Bears, who got a 45-yard field goal from Robbie Gould to make it an eight-point game with 3:10 remaining.

Smith was 26 of 43 for 316 yards and a touchdown with two interceptions — and nearly had a few others. Jeremy Kerley finished with seven catches for 81 yards, and almost came up with a diving grab off a tipped pass in the end zone on the final drive.

"There were some plays you wish you could have back," Jets coach Rex Ryan said.

The Jets lost wide receiver Eric Decker in the first half to a hamstring injury after he was questionable for the game with tightness in the hamstring.

The Bears went up 14-0 just over 5 minutes into the game. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MLB to tackle lengthy games

Incoming baseball commissioner Rob Manfred and players' association head Tony Clark have been selected to participate in a new Major League Baseball committee tasked with decreasing game times.

The committee announced Monday by outgoing commissioner Bud Selig will be chaired by Atlanta Braves president John Schuerholz.

The average time of a nine-inning game has increased from 2 hours, 33 minutes in 1981 to a record 3:03 this year.

Duffy returns. Royals on track for wild card with win over Cleveland

Danny Duffy pitched six shutout innings for his first win in more than a month as the Kansas City Royals moved closer to the top of the AL Central and kept some distance over Cleveland in the wild-card race, beating the Indians 2-0 on Monday night.

Greg Holland worked the ninth for his 44th save as the Royals, seeking their first post-season appearance since 1985, moved within one game of first-place Detroit. The Tigers lost 2-0 at home to the White Sox.
